Personal struggles that would may need to overcome

Huge workloads means skills needed in time management need to be on point and that is one of my worst assets if not taken into consideration at the beginning of a semester/class/bootcamp. So making sure I am on time consistently can sometimes be a double edge sword. Coding can somethings be very overwhelming to start off as there is so much to do so my true problem if I get any will be personally management of my effort and time along with other responsibilities in my life.
